

Notes on Contributors

Raluca ANDREESCU is assistant professor in the Modern Languages Department at the University of Bucharest, Romania. She holds an M.A. in American Studies and a Ph.D. in Philology from the Doctoral School of Literary and Cultural Studies, both with the University of Bucharest. Her main research interests are in the area of American Cultural Studies, American law and literature, Gothic literature and culture, Women's Studies. She is the author of a volume about Female Gothic in the American Century, with a focus on works by Edith Wharton, Shirley Jackson and Joyce Carol Oates, as well as of articles in the above-mentioned fields of interest. E-mail: raluca.andreescu@lils.unibuc.ro

Estella CIOBANU is associate professor at the Faculty of Letters, Ovidius University of Constanța, Romania, where she teaches Identity and Gender in the USA; Culture and Religions in the USA; Postmodernism; and British and American Cultural Icons. Her academic interests include iconisation studies and gendered representations of the body in literature, medieval theatre, cartography, anatomo-medical practices and the arts. She is the author of Representations of the Body in Middle English Biblical Drama (Palgrave Macmillan, 2018), The Body Spectacular in Middle English Theatre (București: Ed. Etnologică, 2013), The Spectacle of the Body in Late Medieval England (Iași: Ed. Lumen, 2012; 2nd revised ed. 2019) and co-author (with Petru Golban) of A Short History of Literary Criticism (Kütahya, Turkey: Üç Mart Press, 2008). She has published over fifty articles and book chapters on medieval topics, gender and the body. E-mail: estella_ciobanu@yahoo.com

Maria-Teodora CREANGĂ is assistant professor in the Department of Anglo-American and German Studies at Lucian Blaga University of Sibiu (LBUS), Romania. Her fields of competence include linguistics (phonetics and phonology, morphology, pragmatics, semantics), and linguistics-based translation theories. She holds an M.A. in the Theory and Practice of Translation from LBUS and a Ph.D. from Babeș-Bolyai University of Cluj-Napoca for her thesis entitled Meaning: Transformation or Malformation in the Translation Process. Her teaching expertise includes English Phonetics and Phonology, Morphology, Semantics, and Consecutive and Simultaneous Interpreting. Over the years, she has also taught courses and seminars in Teaching English as a Foreign Language to prospective EFL teachers, coordinated a number of papers in the field written by EFL teachers across the country, and acted as a teacher trainer for the Teacher Training Department of LBUS.

E-mail: maria.creanga@ulbsibiu.ro

Andrei CRIȘAN is a PhD candidate and is currently writing his dissertation on Cambridge, Corpus Christi College, MS 201. In 2021, he defended a BA dissertation entitled Conquering the Angelcynn: A Discussion of Anglo-Saxon Identity, Heroic Vocabulary and Germanic Ideals. He earned his MA with a thesis titled The Wolf Among the English: Law and Legislation in Late Anglo-Saxon England, which focused on Wulfstan's Institutes of Polity. A Romanian translation of the Old English text was also included. In 2020-2021, he also attended the European Diploma of Medieval Studies (DEEM), organised in Rome by the Fédération Internationale des Instituts d'Études Médiévales (FIDEM). He recently co-authored An Old English Primer (2022), a book designed to help students during their courses and seminars of Old English language and literature.
E-mail: i.andreicrisan@gmail.com

Pol DONETS is Assistant Lecturer at the Department of Romance-Germanic Philology and Foreign Language Teaching, International Humanitarian University, Ukraine. He teaches English language, linguistics, and foreign literature. His research interests include science fiction, transhumanism, and posthumanism. He is a member of the Association of Ukrainian Germanicists, a member of the Center for Ukrainian-European Scientific Cooperation, and a member of the Young Scientists Council of International Humanitarian University. He has published articles on both Ukrainian and Anglo-American science fiction writers. His most recent research focuses on William Gibson and cyberpunk literature, in particular in the context of tropes, expressive means, and stylistic devices.
E-mail: dp85@ukr.net

David Brian HOWARD is a newly retired Associate Professor of Art History in the Division of Art History and Contemporary Culture at the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design (NSCAD) University and an Associate Editor of American, British, and Canadian Studies. He has published numerous essays and critical reviews in the history, culture and politics of modernism and postmodernism in the United States and Canada after World War II and is the author of the book, The Day of the Dogs. His recently completed book, War Machines: Utopia and Allegorical Poetics in the Twenty-First Century, argues for the continuing relevance of critical allegory in the current debates over the relationship between art, politics, and life. These books, as well as other writings from the past decade, can be accessed through <https://nscad.academia.edu/DavidHoward>.
Email: dhoward@nscad.ca

Nataliya KRYNYTSKA is Associate Professor at Poltava V. G. Korolenko National Pedagogical University, Ukraine. In 2008, she received her PhD in foreign literature from the Dnipro University, Ukraine. Her dissertation focused on the ontological poetic elements in Ursula Le Guin's science fiction and fantasy novels. In 2010, she became an alumna of the U.S. Institute on Contemporary American Literature, the University of Louisville, Kentucky. Her research interests cover English-language literature, science fiction, alternate history, dystopia, and fantasy. She has published articles on Ursula Le Guin, Ray Bradbury, Philip K. Dick, among others, science fiction movies and TV series. Her publications include textbooks on the history of English and on contemporary English-language literature and translations of fiction from Ukrainian into English and from English into Ukrainian. She is currently working on a monograph on the national cultural mythology in contemporary U.S. science fiction and fantasy.
E-mail: nataliakrin@gmail.com

Qateralnada MELHEM works as a full-time lecturer at the University of Jordan. She holds a BA degree in English Language and Literature from Yarmouk University in Jordan and an MLitt degree in English Studies from the University of Dundee in Scotland. Her research focuses on the ways in which narrative may illuminate human relations and self-conception, especially in relation to environmental concerns.
E-mail: qmelhem@gmail.com

Alexandra MITREA is Associate Professor of English and American Literature at Lucian Blaga University of Sibiu (LBUS). Her books include The Construction of Identity in Saul Bellow's Major Novels (LBUS Press, 2004), Saul Bellow's Identity in Romania (LBUS Press, 2005), and various articles on the literature of ethnic minorities in English, trauma studies, food studies as well as translation studies. Her most recent book is a collection of articles she edited with Anca-Luminița Iancu – Food Cultures Across Time: Flavours and Endeavours (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2021). At present her research centres on the translation of children's literature. Her teaching expertise covers the poetics of modernism and postmodernism, literary criticism, translation theory and practice.
E-mail: alexandra.mitrea@ulbsibiu.ro

Eman K. MUKATTASH is associate professor of English literature at the Faculty of Foreign Languages, University of Jordan, Amman-Jordan. She obtained her PhD degree in English literature from the University of Jordan in 2013. Her research focuses on literary theory and criticism, psychoanalysis, postcolonial literature and contemporary Arabic literature. She has published a number of articles in several internationally accredited academic journals. Among these are: "The Democratic Vistas of the Body: Rereading the Body in Herman Melville's Typee," "Journeying In and Out: Revisiting the Concept of the Journey in the Works of Naomi Shihab Nye," and "The Politics of Identity in Mahmoud Darwish's Absent Presence: A Textual Act of Resistance."

E-mail: eman_mukattash@hotmail.com

John PEACOCK (Harvard AB, Columbia PhD) has been an Andrew W. Mellon Fellow, Senior Fulbright Lecturer, and grantee of the American Philosophical Society. He has taught at various American universities, as well as abroad, in undergraduate and graduate academic and studio programs, including the Rinehart School of Sculpture, LeRoy E. Hoffberger School of Painting, and Department of Humanistic Studies where he teaches Native American Studies. An enrolled member of the Spirit Lake Dakota Nation, he edited and wrote the introduction and afterword for tribal elders Clifford Canku and Michael Simon's translation into English of The Dakota Prisoner of War Letters (St. Paul: Minnesota History Society, 2013), winner of a 2014 American Association for State and Local History Award. His own writing in the Dakota language has been published in American Indian Quarterly and Studies in American Indian Literature. His essays, fiction, and poetry in English have appeared in over forty publications.

E-mail: jpeacock@mica.edu

Hossein PIRNAJMUDDIN is an associate professor of English at the University of Isfahan, Iran. He received a Ph.D. in English literature from the University of Birmingham, UK, in 2001. His research interests include Renaissance English literature, literary theory, contemporary fiction in English, and translation studies. A book on Renaissance English literature (East of Representation: The East in English Renaissance Literature, 2014) and articles on Spenser, Milton, Conrad, DeLillo, Coetzee, and Shepard are among his publications. His most recent (2022) publication is an essay on Susan Howe's poetry.

E-mail: pirnajmuddin@fgn.ui.ac.ir

Fateme RAHMANI holds an MA in TEFL and is doing a Ph. D. in English literature at the University of Isfahan. Prior to her studies in English literature, she had over fifteen years of experience in TEFL and materials development. However, as an avid reader of English literature, she changed her career. Her main fields of interest are Romantic literature, narratology, modern and postmodern fiction, comparative literature, and literary theory.

E-mail: f.rahmani1387@gmail.com

Bogdan ȘTEFĂNESCU is a literary translator and Professor of English at the University of Bucharest, where he teaches critical theory, British literature, the rhetoric of nationalism, and the comparative cultural study of postcolonialism and postcommunism. He is the author of Patrii din cuvinte (Nations Out of Words, 2017, winner of the Literary Theory Award from the Romanian Association for General and Comparative Literature), Postcommunism/Postcolonialism: Siblings of Subalternity (2013), and Romanticism between Forma Mentis and Historical Profile (1999, 2013), as well as a co-author of Postcolonialism/Postcommunism. Dictionary of Key Cultural Terms (2011) and a co-editor of Postcolonialism/Postcommunism: Intersections and Overlaps (2011). He held various managing positions as Vice-Dean of the Faculty of Foreign Languages and Literatures and Vice-Rector of the University of Bucharest, as well as Deputy Director of the Romanian Cultural Institute in New York. He currently heads the Master's Program in British Cultural Studies and is editor-in-chief of University of Bucharest Review.

E-mail: bogdan.stefanescu@lls.unibuc.ro

Doro WIESE, PhD, is an assistant professor at the Department of Languages and Cultures, Radboud University Nijmegen. Facilitated by various grants such as a Marie Skłodowska Curie scholarship and a WIRL COFUND grant of the European Union, she was trained in literary studies, film studies, and cultural studies at the University of Hamburg, Utrecht University, and the University of Warwick. She holds a PhD Cum Laude from Utrecht University. In her multifaceted research, Doro Wiese investigates how aesthetics is a manner of drawing people into an effective relation with the lacunae of knowledges and histories. In her current project, she asks which epistemological, formal, and thematic distinctions and connections are present in post-war fiction on Native North America on both sides of the Atlantic. Doro Wiese evinces a strong commitment to the study of colonialism, epistemic injustices, transcultural epistemology, the relationship between literature and historiography, or nature and culture. She is inspired by insights formulated in Indigenous Studies.

E-mail: doro.wiese@ru.nl